Spirituality in Art and Design

How are we promoting Spirituality in Art and Design?

Design Creativity Inspiration Challenge Perseverance Patience Compassion Awe	Spirituality is often perceived through the lens of art and design, as it offers children the opportunity to explore and express their personal beliefs, emotions, and life experiences in a creative and meaningful way. This subject acts as a powerful medium for children to connect with their inner selves, nurture empathy and compassion, and develop a deeper appreciation for the world and people around them. Through artistic expression, children are encouraged to reflect on profound questions concerning faith, the divine, the mysteries of life, existence, identity, and morality. They are supported in developing their own unique perspectives, allowing for authentic and personal interpretations in their work. Within the curriculum, spirituality in art and design is evident through the use of symbolism - such as Pentecost doves - or metaphors that represent spiritual themes and emotions. Pupils may explore the beauty and wonders of nature, experiment with colour and motifs to convey deeper meanings, or create pieces that promote unity, harmony, and peaceful coexistence.
